About the Author

Born and raised in Pwllheli on the Llyn Peninsula, Jos Simon ventured into the world beyond Snowdonia as an LSE student in mid-60s swinging London. Having married a Greek, he embarked on a teaching career in various parts of the UK, his life enriched by Greek in-laws, Greek food and Greek holidays. Early retirement brought new challenges as a freelance travel writer, specialising (of course) in stories about Greece. As a result of continued Hellenic touring, with children, then alone, then with grandchildren, writing about Greece for UK magazines, and researching this book, he has come to feel like an honorary Greek.

Great

By KAL

Used this alot with my October 2012 trip to Crete.

We were there for 2 1/2 wks and we only missed one day outside due to a down pour.

The tips let us see lots and some Greeks we met said that we had seem more than them and they lived there on Crete there whole life!
