About the Author

Rabindranath Tagore (May 1861 – 7 August 1941), was a Bengali polymath who reshaped Bengali literature and music, as well as Indian art with Contextual Modernism in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Author of Gitanjali and its "profoundly sensitive, fresh and beautiful verse", he became the first non-European to win the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1913. In translation his poetry was viewed as spiritual and mercurial; however, his "elegant prose and magical poetry" remain largely unknown outside Bengal. Tagore introduced new prose and verse forms and the use of colloquial language into Bengali literature, thereby freeing it from traditional models based on classical Sanskrit. He was highly influential in introducing the best of Indian culture to the West and vice versa, and he is generally regarded as the outstanding creative artist of the modern Indian subcontinent.

Beautifully written, with compassion

By Gerald

Beautifully written, with compassion, wisdom, insight and a reserved humor. Stories of people in traditional Indian social situations, dealing with local values and customs. The stories describe people trying to cope with, or improve on, their lot in life; often with ironic or surprising results. Timeless stories of the heart searching for connection. The reader is taken on a journey to spend time with village and city people in India before modern times, where life is very different from the western experience, but the characters' needs, dreams, virtues and failings are universal.
